ABOUT THE DEGREE PROGRAM

At Norfolk State University, we do indeed see the future in you. At NSU, you will begin to discover your potential and find life-changing opportunities.

In an ever-growing diverse society, the Ph.D. in Social Work will equip you to be a scholar, policymaker, researcher, or community leader. The program is unique in its focus on underserved populations, especially African American families. Students will become leaders of the profession who can facilitate change, advance social work knowledge, promote a scientific basis for social work practice, and advocate for social and economic justice in a rapidly changing and global world.

DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

- The Ph.D. program is a fifty-four (54) credit hour program, which consists of forty-five (45) credit hours of coursework, and nine (9) dissertation credit hours.
- Coursework includes a fifteen (15) credit hour core curriculum, a three (3) credit hour elective, and twenty-seven (27) additional credit hours of coursework in research, policy, theory, and pedagogy.
- At the conclusion of coursework, students must successfully pass the comprehensive examination.
- Completion of a dissertation is the final requirement for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) in Social Work.

TESTIMONIAL:

"The Social Work PhD program was both challenging and rewarding. The supportive faculty helped me to develop into a scholar who can continue to enhance the field of social work. I experienced individual and professional growth as a result of my participation in this program."
