Free Digital News Access for NSU Students, Faculty and Staff

All students, faculty, and staff at Norfolk State University are eligible to receive free access to the content of several national news websites courtesy of the Lyman Beecher Brooks Library. These include the following online publications:

- The Chronicle of Higher Education
- The New York Times
- The Wall Street Journal
- The Washington Post

For each publication, you can receive full access to news, commentary, reviews, videos, and much more through both the website and app. This content can be accessed both on and off campus and through either a computer, laptop, tablet, or phone – essentially with any device connected to the Internet.

To take immediate advantage of this opportunity, you only have to set up an account for each publication. The instructions for doing so are found on the library’s research guide for digital news subscriptions.

Please contact the library at 757-823-2418 or library@nsu.edu for additional information or assistance.
